Our passport or identity card photo is the photo we show to the largest number of different people during our lives. But how happy are we with our photo? Do we make an effort to get a good one? According to research done by the US printer company Lexmark, the answer varies according to nationalities. It seems that Italian are the most embarrassed about their passport photo. On the other hand, 98% of Norwegian said they were happy with their photos. And the French spend most time trying to get perfect photos.

Good manners are good always good manners. That's what Miranda Ingram, who is English, thought, until she married Alexander, who is Russian.

When I first met Alexander and he said to me, in Russian, 'Nalei mny chai – pour me some tea', I got angry and answered, 'pour it yourself'. Translated into English, without a 'could you...?' and a 'please' it sounded really rude to me. But In Russian it was fine- you don't have to add any polite words.

However, when I took Alexander home to meet my parents in the UK, I had to give him an intensive course in pleases and thank yous (which he thought were completely unnecessary), and to teach him to say sorry even if someone else stepped on his toe, and to smile, smile, smile.

Another thing that Alexander just couldn't understand was why people said things like, 'would you mind passing me the salt, please?' he said, 'it's only the salt, for goodness sake! What do you say in English if you want a real favor?

He also watched in amazement when at a dinner party in England, we swallowed some really disgusting food and I said, 'Mmm...delicious'. In Russia, people are much more direct. The first time Alexander's mother came to our house for dinner in Moscow, she told me that my soup needed more flavoring. Afterwards when we argued about it my husband said, 'Do you prefer your dinner guests to lie? Alexander complained that in English he felt like the village idiot because in Russia if you smile all the time people think that you are mad. In fact, this is exactly what my husband's friends thought of me the first I went to Russia because I smiled at everyone, and I translated 'please' and 'thank you' from English into Russian! At home we now have an agreement. If we are speaking Russian, he can say 'pur me some tea' and just make a noise like a grunt when I give it to him. But we are speaking English, he has to add a 'please', a 'thank you', and a smile.
